Quelques paroles de Monsieur le Cure

One of the cheerleaders came up to me at the game two weeks ago and said that this was the last time she would be cheering in Geisler Stadium. When I mentioned the homecoming game, she reminded me that she was on the court and would not be leading the cheers. It was her last go at cheerleading. The downside of senior year is that high school comes to an end.

After the game that same evening, I was standing next to a graduate from last year, a football player, during the singing of the alma mater. He had that look in his eyes. I asked if he missed it, he quickly said yes.

And yet the cheerleader is a very gifted student with much charm who will undoubtedly excel in college and all too soon assume responsibly her role in society. She will do well.

The young man, an exceptional student, is in his first semester in college, doing well, and earned a position on a college team. Given his personality, he will do well in all of his undertakings.

It is also very true that the one will miss Berwick High School and the other does miss it.

Why? If we use the image that life is a journey, then we need to sail from one port to journey to another. A desirable necessity, on the one hand, but it is difficult to make the move. And so it should be.

For those of us who stay, it is also difficult to see loved ones move on.

The hardest part, by far, is no longer having constant contact with the people we love. Moving away means changing the way we relate to friends. Direct, personal contact each day gives way to the occasional visit, telephone call, facebook, texting or some other means of communication.

But it is not the same.

Life demands nonetheless that we adapt and even find the means to continue growing. New and changing situations create the opportunity for new relationships and personal development. The relationships continue to enrich us, the further development helps us to reach our full potential.

Reaching this full potential is our goal as people of faith. St. Irenaeus wrote that the "glory of God is man fully alive." Growth demands change, change is challenging, but we are certainly up to that challenge.

(Msgr.) Courville
